Master mechanic and veteran motorman, Kenny Lockett is one of the many volunteer trolley guys and gals who have made the Astoria Riverfront Trolley possible. The trolley, aka Old 300, was built in 1913 as a street car for the city of San Antonio Texas. After a hard life, serving as everything from a chicken coop to a woman's residence, she was brought to Astoria in 1998 in a complete state of disrepair. Volunteers brought her back to life and have kept her running ever since. This bottle celebrates her 100th birthday, as well as those volunteers. Enjoy!

The cruise ships that stop by the Port of Astoria in March and May then again in September and October bring in much commerce to the town, port, and the trolley and in return we send the passengers off with the good feeling they will return to Astoria to see more of it.

36 Hours in Astoria, Ore.

By PABLEAUX JOHNSON

STEEPED in local history and situated a leisurely two-hour drive from Portland, the small city of Astoria, Ore., doesn't have the ticky-tacky tourist infrastructure that dominates many Pacific Coast towns. Instead, it's a quiet place, a former timber port and cannery town where huge container ships glide past on their way through the mouth of the Columbia River. That setting has always guided Astoria's destiny, from Lewis and Clark's expedition of discovery, through its years as a fur-trading and fishing outpost financed by John Jacob Astor (hence the name), to its long tenure as a working-class port. Now the city is reinventing itself as a getaway destination by capitalizing on its well-preserved Victorian architecture and rugged beauty. Oregonians are happy to spend a warm bed-and-breakfast weekend, fogbound or not, among the ghosts of Astoria's past.

5) Tracking the Trolley

For 10 months of the year, the riverfront trolley - a restored 1913 electric model - makes runs in fair weather through Astoria's old Finnish neighborhood and its picturesque dock and cannery areas. During the 45-minute round trip, volunteer conductors helpfully provide plenty of local history, including details about the town's appearances in big and often atrocious Hollywood films ("Kindergarten Cop," "Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles III," "The Goonies," "Short Circuit," "Come See the Paradise," "The Ring Two" and "Free Willy" I and II). Two dollars buys you a daylong pass for the route; $1 is good for one trip. (In the colder months, the trolley runs from 1 to 4 p.m. Friday through Sunday when there is no rain; it does not run at all during the rainy months of December and January. For more information call 503-325-6311 or 800-875-6807.)
